4. Describe the qualities of a good leader. Use examples of famous leaders or someone you admire to demonstrate your points.

TLT Conference Youth Behavior Guidelines

As a participant of the TLT conference, I understand and accept the following responsibilities:

1. While at TLT I am expected to abstain from the following behaviors: drug/alcohol use, violence or threats of violence, vandalism, and engaging in sex. There is zero tolerance for these behaviors-the consequence is to be sent home from the conference.
2. I will be expected to be on time and attend the general sessions. Two of them are first thing in the morning.
3. I will be expected to choose and attend a workshop during each time slot on the conference agenda. Be on time-many workshops are limited in size and take in whoever gets there first (for example, Wall Climbing).
4. Boys are not allowed in the girls' wings of the dormitories. Girls are not allowed in the boys' wings of the dormitories.
5. No one should be in the dormitories during the day. Sleep at night. The conference agenda doesn't include naps! (unfortunately)
6. Please go directly to your room after the dance on Wednesday and after the cruise on Thursday. . Expect your youth worker to be looking for you.
7. Please stay in your dorm rooms during the night. You will be confronted by campus police if you are outside wandering around.
8. Stay off your telephone after 1:00AM. Ringing telephones keeps everyone awake. Your youth worker is empowered to remove your phone from your room.
9. There is not a nurse on duty at UMD. Let your youth worker know if you feel ill, if you have a problem with medication, or if you injure yourself.
10. Wear your name tag- it is your "meal ticket" for the cafeteria.
11. Hang on to your dorm key- UMD will charge you a large fee if lost.
12. I will be a full participant, try to speak up in workshops, ask questions, and try something new. I will be a role model for other youth, and be respectful and courteous. and above all, I will have fun!!

By signing this I acknowledge that I have read the above information and agree to follow it.
